

The below email was sent to employees of Hess Corporation (“Hess”) on March 6, 2024 by Hess management in connection with the proposed acquisition of Hess by Chevron Corporation.

Merger Update

Today, ExxonMobil announced that it is filing for arbitration regarding the applicability of a right of first refusal (ROFR) / pre-emption provision in the Stabroek joint operating agreement. We believe that the ROFR / pre-emption provision does not apply to the Chevron-Hess merger. We remain fully committed to the transaction and look forward to closing. We disagree with ExxonMobil’s interpretation of the agreement and are confident that our position will prevail in arbitration.

You may recall that Chevron filed an S-4 with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) with required disclosures about the combination of our companies for review by shareholders prior to a shareholder vote on the merger. As described in the S-4, there is no possible scenario in which Exxon or CNOOC could acquire Hess’ interest in Guyana as a result of the Chevron-Hess transaction.

While the arbitration process is underway, we will continue working with the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC) on its review of the transaction, preparing for a shareholder vote and planning for the integration of our companies.

In light of today’s development, we are reviewing the expected timeline for legal closing and will provide further detail in our next merger update. In the meantime, please continue to stay focused on what the Hess team does so well – safe, reliable and responsible operations and strong performance.

Thank you for your continued dedication to our company.

Forward-looking statements by their nature address matters that are, to different degrees, uncertain, such as statements about the consummation of the Merger, including the expected time period to consummate the Merger, and the anticipated benefits (including synergies) of the Merger. All such forward-looking statements are based upon current plans, estimates, expectations and ambitions that are subject to risks, uncertainties and assumptions, many of which are beyond the control of Chevron and Hess, that could cause actual results to differ materially from those expressed in such forward-looking statements. Key factors that could cause actual results to differ materially include, but are not limited to, the risk that regulatory approvals are not obtained or are obtained subject to conditions that are not anticipated by Chevron and Hess; potential delays in consummating the Merger, including as a result of regulatory proceedings or the ongoing arbitration proceedings regarding preemptive rights in the Stabroek Block joint operating agreement; risks that such ongoing arbitration is not satisfactorily resolved and the Merger fails to be consummated; Chevron’s ability to integrate Hess’ operations in a successful manner and in the expected time period; the possibility that any of the anticipated benefits and projected synergies of the Merger will not be realized or will not be realized within the expected time period; the occurrence of any event, change or other circumstance that could give rise to the termination of the Merger Agreement; risks that the anticipated tax treatment of the Merger is not obtained; unforeseen or unknown liabilities; customer, shareholder, regulatory and other stakeholder approvals and support; unexpected future capital expenditures; potential litigation relating to the Merger that could be instituted against Chevron and Hess or their respective directors; the possibility that the Merger may be more expensive to complete than anticipated, including as a result of unexpected factors or events; the effect of the announcement, pendency or completion of the Merger on the parties’ business relationships and business generally; risks that the Merger disrupts current plans and operations of Chevron or Hess and potential difficulties in Hess employee retention as a result of the Merger, as well as the risk of disruption of Chevron’s or Hess’ management and business disruption during the pendency of, or following, the Merger; the receipt of required Chevron board of directors’ authorizations to implement capital allocation strategies, including future dividend payments; uncertainties as to whether the Merger will be consummated on the anticipated timing or at all, or if consummated, will achieve its anticipated economic benefits, including as a result of risks associated with third party contracts containing material consent, anti-assignment, transfer or other provisions that may be related to the Merger which are not waived or otherwise satisfactorily resolved; changes in commodity prices; negative effects of the announcement of the Merger, and the pendency or completion of the Merger on the market price of Chevron’s or Hess’ common stock and/or operating results; rating agency actions and Chevron’s and Hess’ ability to access short- and long-term debt markets on a timely and affordable basis; various events that could disrupt operations, including severe weather, such as droughts, floods, avalanches and earthquakes, and cybersecurity attacks, as well as security threats and governmental response to them, and technological changes; labor disputes; changes in labor costs and labor difficulties; the effects of industry, market, economic, political or regulatory conditions outside of Chevron’s or Hess’ control; legislative, regulatory and economic developments targeting public companies in the oil and gas industry; and the risks described in Part I, Item 1A “Risk Factors” of (i) Chevron’s Annual Report on Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 2023 and (ii) Hess’ Annual Report on Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 2023, and, in each case, in subsequent filings with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”). Other unpredictable or factors not discussed in this communication could also have material adverse effects on forward-looking statements. Neither Chevron nor Hess assumes an obligation to update any forward-looking statements, except as required by law. You are cautioned not to place undue reliance on any of these forward-looking statements as they are not guarantees of future performance or outcomes and that actual performance and outcomes. These forward-looking statements speak only as of the date hereof.
